Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Adams and Mrs. C. L. Adams from West Minater, Mass., are visiting at G. H. Adams.

A RAILWAY'S HOODOO.

Gray White Owl's Cries Belleved to Foretell Disaster.

A grav and white owl which hirks to trees in the early mornings and hoots York, New Haven and Hartford rall road go whizzing by New Haven Conn., has come to be regarded as a booded by the trainmen, says the Part adelphia Press. Death and catastrophe have marked the system for weeks. Hardly a day has passed but a wreck has occurred or a trainman has gone to his death. In nearly every instance engineers and firemen say the hoodoo owl appeared by night or day a few hours before.

So strong has grown the superstition concerning the hoodoo bird that attempts have been made to kill it, but though stray shots have been fired from trains in the suburbs no one has reported having hit the owl.

It is not generally known that the word cutty as applied to a species of clay pipe very much used is a corruption of Kutalch, a city in Asia Minor, where a species of soft white stone is found which is exported by the Turks to Germany for the manufacture of tobacco pipes.

THE RATHGEBER TRIPLETS.

Proud Pather Hears the News While Borrowing Baby Clothes.

The residents of East New York, in Brooklyn, are confident that if President Roosevelt would just come around and take a peep in at the family of William Rathgeber, who lives in Drew avenue, near Atlantic, he would take a more hopeful view of the race suicide matter, says the New York Times, There is no race suicide going on in the Rathgeber household. Until a few days ago there were nine little Rathgebers. Now there are twelve, the newest three having arrived together. Mr. Rathgeber was comfortably seated in the dining room reading his newspaper the other morning when the nurse opened the door and stuck her

"It's a boy," she announced.

"Hooray!" exclaimed Mr. Rathgeber, throwing down his paper and rushing out to be congratulated by the neighbors. He was making a house to house hand shaking tour when one of his young sons overtook him.

"Hey, pop," he said brenthlessly, 'there's another one of 'em!" "Another what?" asked Mr. Rath-

"She said it was a girl this time." "Wow!" velled Mr. Rathgeber, making a bee line for home. As clothing for only one baby had been provided the second arrival caused some embarrassment and confusion. Mr. Rathgeber was sent out hot foot to borrow baby apparel from the neighbors. He was rushing from house to house when another of his many sons ran up to lilm. "They says for you to get clothes enough for another one while you're at it." announced the youngster. "What! For another one?" gasped

Mr. Rathgeber.

"Yep; there's three of 'em now," returned the boy. Mr. Rathgeber started back over the route and gathered together enough clothing for half a dozen bubies. At the rate they were coming he felt that there might be that many there when he got back to the house. But the It was with some difficulty that the third baby, a boy, was the last. The sachers succeeded in finding boarding father rushed off for his pastor and had him at once christen the new arrivals. They were named respectively Peter, Mary and Charles. Then he had the three photographed together and finally was for hoisting the flag two of firecrackers, but was prevailed upon to forego this demonstration of
